Located at the heart of Tel Aviv, TAU Faculty of Law is Israel’s premier law school. It offers an environment of excellence and educational intimacy in the form of renowned faculty, vibrant student life, ample opportunities for clinical training, and extracurricular activities. Small by design, the faculty’s impact on the legal world is measured by its accomplished graduates and its ongoing scholarship and outreach through numerous centers and projects. The Faculty consists of outstanding scholars in virtually every major field of law who enjoy national and international reputation. In recent years, the Faculty has published a great number of books and articles through the world’s most prestigious university presses and the most acclaimed law reviews. Faculty members have won a number of best book prizes (such as those of the American Association of the History of Law and the American Association of the Sociology of Law) and have presented articles at the most distinguished forums. They are board members of important American Law journals that accept only a small number of non-Americans into their ranks, and of influential and exclusive international organizations. According to Lexis database the scholarship of the TAU Law is the most cited of all faculties in Israel.

Tel Aviv University’s Faculty of Law includes Israel Prize laureates and winners of the Emet Prize for Art, Science and Culture, and the Humboldt Prize for Lifetime Achievement. Members of TAU Law have won other highly-regarded prizes, such as the Zeltner and Cheshin Awards, and the distinguished European Research Council Advanced Grant. Professor Nili Cohen was recently named the President of the Israel Academy of Arts and Sciences. TAU Law professors are frequently invited to teach at the world’s top law schools and to prominently participate in the most respected law conferences. The school’s breadth of activity and reputation for excellence makes TAU the #1 choice for Israeli students and Faculty of Law graduates the most sought after by Israeli employers. The Faculty’s proud graduates include six current Supreme Court Justices and over 80 judges in other courts, including 13 Presidents and Vice-Presidents of District and Magistrate Courts. Alumni include government ministers, members of Parliament, and CEOs of major international Israeli companies. Dozens of Faculty graduates serve in senior positions in top American law schools including Harvard and NYU. Through its faculty, students and alumni, TAU Faculty of Law contributes meaningful solutions to the world’s most complex legal and social challenges.

With increasing globalization distinctions between the domestic and the international fade. Numerous regulatory decisions, once decided domestically, are influenced, even shaped, by international institutions and international law. These processes also impact Israel and the entire Middle East region. Israel is particularly exposed to the forces of globalization being open to international trade and subject to scrutiny by external actors for its policies. Israel is also a major contributor to the evolution of international law mainly through the sophisticated and groundbreaking decisions of the Supreme Court that resonate throughout the world and command attention and respect. Israeli scholarship on international law stands at the cutting edge of the study of international law and is widely respected.

The goal of the International Law and Human Rights Track is to provide students with tools that will enable them to identify and explore the emerging global regulatory regimes in the fields of human rights and humanitarian law, environmental and cultural heritage protection, trade and investment regulation, and other fields, and to assess the normative challenges that these regimes pose to our democratic sensibilities and reflect on the possibilities for shaping these global institutions and their policies through accountability requirements of transparency, participation, reason-giving, liability, and judicial review. The track is therefore attractive not only to students interested in international law but also to those whose passion is constitutional law and administrative law and wish to gain tools to address problems of public law and policy in an era of global interdependency.

The Faculty of Law at Tel Aviv University has strong reputation in these fields of law. In addition to our professors who teach international law, many in our Faculty are committed to exploring law from a transnational perspective: traditional subjects such as constitutional law, administrative law, criminal law, labor law, tax law, environmental law, are taught with an eye to the global legal aspects. This breadth of research is reflected in the wide selection of courses offered to the students taking this track. Students can choose one of two year-long seminars: Dr. Eliav Lieblich on the Theory of International Law, or with Dr. Hila Shamir, on Labor Approach to Human Trafficking. During the Fall Semester, one can take courses with Prof. Hans Bernd Schäfer (Hamburg University) on Law and the Poverty of Nations; with Prof. Kim Rubenstein (Australian National University) a course on Citizenship Law in Context; and with Dr. Daphna Shraga (U.N.), a course on International Legal Perspectives on the Israeli-Palestinian Conflict. Our own Prof. Eyal Benvenisti teaches a course...
Lieblich and Dr. Doreen Lustig (TAU Law) hosts authors who discuss their works in progress with students; Prof. Raj Bhala (University of Kansas) teaches International Trade Law; Prof. Leora Bilsky (TAU Law) offers Transitional Justice; Ms. Rachel Friedman (TAU Law) offers Welfare State: Philosophy, Politics and Law; Prof. Rene Uruena (Los Andes University, Colombia) teaches Transformative constitutionalism in Latin America; Ms. Melanie Levi (TAU) delves into Health and Human Rights.

In the Spring semester, the International Law Workshop led by Prof. Aeyal Gross, Dr. Eliav Lieblich and Dr. Doreen Lustig (TAU Law) hosts authors who discuss their works in progress with students; Prof. Raj Bhala (University of Kansas) teaches International Trade Law; Prof. Leora Bilsky (TAU Law) offers Transitional Justice; Ms. Rachel Friedman (TAU Law) offers Welfare State: Philosophy, Politics and Law; Prof. Rene Uruena (Los Andes University, Colombia) teaches Transformative constitutionalism in Latin America; Ms. Melanie Levi (TAU) delves into Health and Human Rights.

Jessica L., Paris, France, Class of 2015
Welcome to the beating heart of Start-Up Nation! Do you have a memory stick? It was invented a few buildings away from our law school, at the Faculty of Engineering at TAU. Do you use online banking? Your bank probably uses a firewall invented in Israel. Does your car have MobileEye installed? That too, was developed nearby, in Jerusalem. There is a reason why Google, Facebook, Intel, HP and other global hi-tech companies have established research centers in Israel. We are in the midst of an information revolution, with Big Data, Artificial Intelligence, the Internet of Things, and a mobile revolution converging. Our Law & Technology track focuses on the interface of law and technology. The track offers courses on Intellectual Property (IP), cyber and information law, and other related issues.

Introductory courses are offered so that you can delve into the issues even if you have little or no previous background. The advanced seminars, workshops, and introductory courses are taught by first-rate professors, enabling you to immerse yourselves into the topic, and experience different modes of teaching.

To complete your specialization in Law & Technology track, you must take at least 11 credits of the LLM’s 32 required credits, from courses within the Law & Technology track, but you are more than welcome to take as many courses as you see fit – and that fit your schedule. You can focus on IP or on Information Law, or mix both, as you wish. You can also take courses from the other tracks, in addition to general elective courses.

The professors and courses refer to the 2018-2019 academic year – please be aware that courses and professors change each year.

Intellectual Property. If you wish to delve into the world of patents, copyright, trade secrets and other IP fields, in the Fall semester, students can take Introduction to IP, co-taught by two leading Israeli specialists, Adv. Tony Greenman, who will make sure you know the fundamentals of copyright law, and Adv. Eran Bareket, who will bring his expertise in patent law. Students can study with Prof. Suzy Frankel (Victoria University, New Zealand) Global Issues in Intellectual Property, and with Prof. Yongfan Zhang (Renmin University, China) you can delve into China’s Intellectual Property Law and Its Historical, Cultural and Traditional Aspects. In the Spring Semester, you can study International IP Law with Dr. Amir Khoury (TAU Law), and a practical business course on Licensing of IP, taught by Adv. David Mirchin. For those with interest in the arts, you can take Visual Arts & the Law, with Prof. Kurt Siehr (Max Planck Institute, Germany), and Prof. Steven Wilf (University of
The second leg of the track is information and cyber law. The introductory course is taught in the format of a seminar, Information Technology Law, during the Fall Semester, by the program’s academic director, Prof. Michael Birnhack. The seminar is composed of classes, student lectures, and ultimately, students own original research work. The Law & Information Technology Workshop is a unique TAU Law format of studying, taught by Prof. Michael Birnhack (TAU Law) and Prof. Assaf Jacob (IDC Law). The workshop enables scholars and students to engage directly on academic works in progress: our guests discuss the papers they are working on, eager for student feedback.

You will be able to discuss innovative issues about Digital Free Speech under U.S. Law with Prof. Eugene Volokh (University of California Los Angeles - UCLA). In 2018-19 we offer an innovative course on the business aspects of Start-Up Law, taught by Prof. Ayal Shenhav and Adv. Gal Hoffman. Prof. Margot Kaminski (University of Colorado) breaks new paths, and discusses Law of Robotics and Artificial Intelligence. Finally, Adv. Steven Zipperstein, General Counsel and Chief Legal Officer, BlackBerry, shares his vast experience and teaches an Advanced Course on Law and Technology.

To complete your specialization in Law & Business track, you must take at least 11 credits of the LL.M’s 32 required credits, from courses within the Law & Business track, but you are more than welcome to take as many courses as you see fit – and that fit your schedule. You can also take courses from the International Law and Human Rights and the Law & Technology tracks, in addition to general elective courses.

The professors and courses refer to the 2018-2019 academic year - please be aware that courses and professors change each year.

In the Fall Semester, students can study with Prof. Hans Bernd Schäfer (Hamburg University) a unique course on Law and the Poverty of Nations; you can take a course on Antitrust Policy, taught by Prof. David Gilo (TAU Law), the former Head of the Israeli Antitrust Authority; and a course on Risk Derivatives and Financial Crises taught by Adv. Menachem Feder. Dr. Hadar Jabotinsky offers a course on Business Law, and Prof. Ayal Shenhav and Adv. Gal

Israel today is the hub of much international corporate and business activity. Corporate giants from the U.S., Europe and Asia are looking for opportunities in Israel, buying companies and opening research centers. MobilEye’s acquisition by Intel for $15 Billion is a recent example. Venture capital and private equity companies follow suit and aim for Israel’s earlier stage companies. At the same time that foreigners invest in Israel, Israeli companies look outward to raise capital and seek larger product markets. Israel is the foreign country with the second largest number of companies quoted on the NASDAQ, with 95 such companies (and counting!). Many Israeli companies, cross list in Israel and abroad, and the Israeli Securities Law is highly innovative in this regard. Finally, some Israeli companies play a major role in international transactions. To say the least, Israel today is an exciting place to study business law.

The Law & Business track of the International LL.M. Program focuses on the fundamentals of business strategy catered to a legal audience. The course topics and frameworks are drawn from business law as well as MBA curriculums of leading schools abroad. The track offers courses on an array of topics: Startup Financing and Governance, Shareholder Activism, Issues in Competition Law, Negotiations in the Technology Industry, and related issues.
Hoffman teach an innovative course on Start-Up Law.

In the Spring Semester, we offer a seminar on Business Law: Transnational Perspectives, by Dr. Ido Baum. In the Workshop on Law & Economics, led by Prof. Avraham Tabbach & Dr. Shay Lavie, both of TAU Law, students will discuss cutting-edge research with authors who present their works in progress.

Prof. Alberto Aronovitz (Swiss Institute of Comparative Law) teaches a course on The Protection of International Investments; Prof. Reuven Avi Yonah (University of Michigan) navigates students through International Taxation; and Prof. Raj Bhala (University of Kansas) discusses International Trade Law.

Prof. Alberto Heimler (Scuola Superiore della Pubblica Amministrazione, Roma) discusses Optimal Regulation and Optimal Institutional Structure; with Prof. Edward Janger (Brooklyn Law School) students will make sure not to go bankrupt, with his course on Business Bankruptcy. Prof. Paul Miller (University of Notre Dame) offers a course on Corporate Law Theory. If you are interested in the business aspects of IP, you can take Adv. David Mirchin’s course on Licensing of IP.

This is how it looks, for the Business lawyer:

Thesis Information

The International LL.M. is without a thesis.

Writing a thesis is a path to explore a topic of your interest in depth, and is a necessary prerequisite for doctoral studies at TAU.

Students may apply to write a thesis after the completion of the LL.M. program in order to continue onto PhD studies at TAU Law.

The thesis program is geared towards candidates who already hold an LL.B. and LL.M. degrees (with a minimal final grade of 85).

In addition to submitting a thesis dissertation (about 80 pages), the students will have to take a seminar taught in English (in addition to the one taken during LL.M.)

Or an Independent research project with a faculty member (preferably not the supervisor).

The preliminary stage is to find an academic staff member (at TAU Law) who will agree to supervise your thesis. The Faculty’s admissions committee will review all applications and notify the candidate.

Please note that TAU cannot offer any scholarships to students who are enrolled in this program.

Theoretical Inquiries in Law (TIL) is a biannual English-language law journal published by the Cegla Center for Interdisciplinary Research of the Law at TAU Law.

Each year TIL publishes one volume, which is comprised of two separate issues. Each issue contains about eight to fifteen articles dedicated to a distinctive topic of law or legal theory, contributing groundbreaking research and new insights in the field.

TIL has the highest impact factor among all non-U.S. law reviews, and is well-known and much cited in Israel and all over the world.

The journal specializes in the application to legal problems of insights developed in other disciplines, such as moral and political theory, epistemology, history, cultural studies, social sciences, economics and game theory, probability theory, and cognitive psychology.

International LL.M students are invited to apply to become members of TIL’s student editorial board.

Board members are involved in all stages of the editorial process: attending the conference in which the papers are presented and discussed, substantive editing, citation checks, and final proofreading.

Board members acquire important experience in addressing academic work.

Each TIL volume focuses on a specific topic, which enables board members to delve therein.

LL.M Students are entitled to 2 academic credits.

Working hours are flexible. The duration of the membership lasts until publication of the volume (some work can be done from afar).

For application details, email studylaw@tau.ac.il

TIL is ranked second in the world in Jurisprudence and Legal Theory, ahead of established journals such as Law & Social Inquiry, or Oxford Journal of Legal Studies!

Yue Gao (25) began working immediately after her graduation from the 2015-2016 class of the Parasol Foundation International LL.M. Program, at the China Desk of Fischer Behar Chen Well Orion & Co., one of Israel’s leading law firms. Before her studies in Israel, she had internship experiences at an American NGO operating in China, and at a Shanghai law firm.

What made you apply to the International LL.M. Program at TAU Law?
"Many Chinese law students choose to study for a second Master’s degree outside of China, to become better acquainted with Western legal systems, and with the international business world and its practices, and to better prepare for their professional career. Some stay abroad, but most return to China, because of the many opportunities and the great demand in China for people with that kind of knowledge. Israel is known in China for its innovation and creativity, and as the start-up nation. I found out about the Parasol Foundation International LL.M. Program at TAU Law when I was studying for my Master’s degree in Shanghai at the Jiao Tong University, one of the leading Chinese universities. There is a student exchange program between Jiao Tong and TAU Law. I did some research and found out that TAU Law and its International LL.M. Program are considered to be very good. It is also quite unique and different from the usual and familiar destinations for Chinese law students: the US, Australia, and the UK."

How is it different?
"For most Chinese, Israel is a mysterious place. When I announced my intention to come here, some of my classmates in China wondered whether it is an Arab country, being in the Middle East… As I collected more information about Israel I was even more eager to come, because of its many complexities and because of my desire to judge for myself rather than to rely on international media. Also, US colleagues from my internship in Shanghai encouraged me and considered it to be a good experience."

How did your family respond to your decision to study in Israel?
"They are like me. They said ‘go and explore.’ I also got a scholarship from the Parasol Foundation, the sponsor of the International LL.M Program, which considerably relieved me and my family from financial worries during my studies here.”

What was your experience when you arrived?
“Of course, Tel Aviv is a modern city, not very different from Shanghai. The program itself is very diversified, with classmates from all over the world, and the discussions are likewise very international, with everyone voicing their opinion about what it is like in their country in comparison with the state of affairs in Israel. The faculty are amazing and I enjoyed the discussions with them and learned a lot in the process. The Dean, for example, taught us the very first course, “Introduction to Israeli Law,” and he was extremely knowledgeable, answering every small question with a lecture! We also took field trips, for example, to the Supreme Court, where we met one of the Justices. In fact, it is not only a legal program, but also a window onto Israeli culture and society.”

Indeed, how do you find Israeli culture?
“I think that Israelis are more open to different opinions, more willing to take up challenges, and they do not conceal their feelings. They say what they really feel. China is more conservative in this sense.”

Could you tell us a bit about your current position in one of Israel’s largest law firms?
“It is well known that in Israel the legal services market is extremely competitive, and it’s not less so for a foreigner like myself. Meanwhile, the most attractive aspect of my work is that it is much needed by the practice and by the market, and that it is very helpful for both Israeli companies and entrepreneurs, as well as for Chinese business people and investors. I think that I do something that contributes to the development of the business relations between the two countries. It is valuable work for me, and I’m greatly honored to be part of it.”

Luiza Rezende (28) grew up in São Paulo and studied law at the University of São Paulo Law Faculty. After her LL.B. graduation, Luiza started practicing business law, but at the same time discovered a keen interest in technology and digital media. She eventually became partner in a law firm in São Paulo that specializes in the local high-tech industry, and at the same time applied her digital media skills to create a blog on entrepreneurship and technology. Today more than 650,000 people follow her publications on social networks. Luiza moved from Brazil to Europe and from there to Israel. Based on her legal experience and her desire to work in the high-tech market, the TAU International LL.M. track in Law and Technology was a perfect way to get to know Israel and at the same time become integrated into the globally leading Israeli high-tech industry from its legal aspect.

"I contacted the International LL.M. administrative director in June 2015, and inquired about the 2016-2017 class, but she said, why not start already this September? Just send me ASAP all the documents, recommendations, and so on, and I’ll get you in! And so, within two months I found myself living and studying in Tel Aviv… and I loved every second of it. It’s a very high-quality program, extremely well organized, with fascinating subjects, such as IT law and a privacy workshop — I didn’t study anything of the kind in Brazil. It was both new and unique."

Weren’t your parents concerned about you going to Israel?
"They were. The media in Brazil is generally negatively biased against Israel, picturing it as a war zone. I had been in Israel before, so I was already expecting something positive. With time, they realized that Israel is a very good place for me to be, and that they didn’t need to worry. In addition, Israelis are warm, informal, and welcoming. It’s easy to make friends here, which makes the experience even more fulfilling for anyone coming from abroad."

When did you decide to pursue a third degree?
"In Brazil it is not common for students to study full-time for their Master’s or Ph.D. in law, or even to pursue an academic career without simultaneously practicing law, because the scholarships are extremely low. So being full-time in academia is not something realistic for a Brazilian. But then, in a class, the academic director of the LL.M. Program, Prof. Michael Birnhack, mentioned that there is a highly competitive, fully sponsored European technology-related Ph.D. project, and I thought, why not apply? At the same time I applied to Israeli law firms, relying on my discussions were internationally rich, and the engagement with the material was different. For example, we had to write ‘reaction papers,’ which involve you with the material taught in class throughout the course, rather than having to wait until the final exam. Also, some courses have a 24 hours exam, which is more like writing a paper in a rush, and if you didn’t follow the lessons, you won’t be able to catch up and come up with a good end result."

What was especially surprising in your studies here?
"The Law Faculty of the University of São Paulo is very traditional; when I studied there, we had large classes of more than 100 students. Here, the class was small and socially connected, the experience and resume, being a partner in Brazil, and speaking six languages, to open some doors. And then I was accepted to the Ph.D. program.”

“Tell us a bit more about your Ph.D. project. It’s called ‘Privacy and Usability,’ or in short, Privacy & Us. The project involves 13 Ph.D. students in different countries, and meetings are held each time in a different country. The majority of my colleagues in the project are computer scientists or human-computer interaction professionals. Of course, privacy carries with it a clear technical aspect, and being the only lawyer, I get to learn other aspects of this field. The focus of my work is ‘Informed Consent in Privacy,’ and I’m quite passionate about the topic. This Ph.D. is something I wouldn’t have dreamt about in Brazil.”

What is your long-term goal following the Ph.D.? I’m much interested in working in the field of privacy, in the high-tech industry, or in government. I think that the knowledge and the skills I’m gaining are unique, and privacy is a rapidly growing field, with laws that are likewise changing rapidly. More and more companies are becoming aware of privacy issues, and they will need specialized professionals to help them navigate this landscape.”

“It is not only a legal program, but also a window onto Israeli culture and society”
Matias Ludman, born and raised in Rio Negro, Patagonia, Argentina, studied for his LL.B. at the University of Salvador, Buenos Aires, then started working in the fields of civil and labor law in Buenos Aires. Feeling limited within his professional specialization, Matias started looking for an LL.M. program abroad, to obtain an alternative and more satisfactory legal specialization. Being acquainted with Israel as a past participant in both the Taglit-Birthright (2009) and the Masa (2010) programs, both programs designed to introduce Jewish youths from all over the world to Israel, Matias inquired about the Parasol Foundation International LL.M. and was delighted to find out about the program’s law and technology track. In preparation for his application to the program, Matias decided to make aliyah.

“The LL.M. experience was really amazing and the time just flew by. It was a ten-month program, but it felt like one month. I enjoyed every aspect of it: the perfect combination of courses and the diversity in the class, which I attended with colleagues and professors from China, France, Germany, the US, Canada, Brazil, and the UK.”

Where there things which you found difficult to adjust to?

“At first it was difficult because of the method of study, which gives students a great degree of freedom and choices. This is different from the way we study in Argentina, at least at the LL.B. level, where, for example, we have a final oral exam that is a kind of ordeal. In contrast, most of the final exams in the International LL.M. at TAU Law were take-home exams. But in the end, one way or the other, you need to show the results of your learning.”

“As for Israeli culture in general, or should I say, Israel’s mix of cultures, although I was familiar with it, it took me a while to get used to Israeli chutzpah… actually now I cannot get rid of it, and between you and me, it’s not such a bad tool for a lawyer!”

“In addition, after I finished my LL.B. in Argentina, I began a second LL.B., as an external student, at the University of London, so I got to study common law. Once in Israel, even though I was not familiar with Israeli law, my studies in common law were useful for understanding the Israeli combination of civil law and the inherited common law. In some ways, Israeli law is as unique as Israel itself.”

What was your impression of the program faculty?

“In Argentina, being a law professor is not a common career, and most lawyers seek

“Despite having relatives and friends in Israel, my girlfriend and I missed our families, and that was a major factor. In addition, it is not easy for someone whose mother tongue is not Hebrew or English to find a job as an international lawyer in Israel. And becoming a lawyer in Israel requires taking a set of nine exams of the Israeli Bar Association, plus one year of internship, which amounts to a period of another two to three years of studies. I wasn’t willing to do that. I therefore decided to return to Argentina and apply for a job in an international field of law, which was my aim prior to the LL.M., and I have accomplished it! Nowadays I work in one of Argentina’s largest firms: Marval, O’Farrell & Mairal, in the field of corporate law. I can say that after the International LL.M. my career took 180-degree turn.”

How is your LL.M. degree perceived in the Argentinian legal practice?

“There is no such thing in Argentina as an LL.M. in law and technology, and the specialization itself is something unique. At Marval, a firm with over 300 lawyers, only a few specialize in technology! So my degree is considered very valuable locally. It is something huge for me.”

Diana Roif (29) first visited Israel when she was 18 years old, as a member of the German Table Tennis Women’s Team for the 17th Maccabiah Games (2005). Encouraged by the experience, she participated in the two subsequent Maccabiah games as well. In between, she completed her First State Examination in Law at Heidelberg University (2012), Germany’s elite university for law studies. After the Maccabiah in 2013, and in proximity to her completion of the Second State Examination in Law at the Regional Court of Frankfurt (2015), Diana came to the decision to explore her interest in Israel more thoroughly.

“Every time I came to Israel I thought of staying a bit longer and was looking for the right way to do it. I found out about the International LLM. during the last Maccabiah. But first I wanted to finish my Second State Exam, to be 100% qualified to work as lawyer or as a judge in Germany. Nevertheless, it was clear to me that I wanted to apply for the International LLM. Not often in my life did I have such a strong feeling that I really had to do something. In this case, I felt it 100% and was very happy to have found this opportunity. It came from the heart.”

From a professional legal aspect, what made you so confident in your decision to pursue the International LLM.?

“During my first degree, as well as during my ‘Referendariat,’ I specialized in intellectual property, and it was nice to discover that the program has a special law and technology track. I also contacted the administrative director of the program and asked for contact details of the German alumni and students. I contacted all of them, and they all praised both the program and this track. Of course, some of them talked to me after just returning from the sunny beaches of Tel Aviv, while I was freezing in Germany, so it also had an impact…”

Could you give us your perspective of the studies in the program?

“The method of study is completely different from that in Germany. At TAU it is more open-minded, and you can be more creative and think outside of boxes. In Germany, it is stricter and you have less freedom of choice. You need to fulfil A, B, and C, and nobody stops to ask whether you may actually be interested in D. Maybe it has also to do with the fact that this is a second degree. For whatever reason, I liked it. Also, the mixture of contents in the program was perfect, and so, even if you are interested in a certain specialization, you also have the opportunity to broaden your horizons. The field trips, however, all fell on rainy days… It was particularly funny when we came to see the desert in the south, and some of us had never seen a desert before, and it was pouring!”

One of the program's courses is about Israeli law. How did you find the Israeli legal system?
“There are things that I couldn’t believe at first, for instance, the absence of a formal constitution, which for me is the proper foundation of a proper democracy. This is one of the unfamiliar things I mentioned.”

When did you decide that you wish to stay in Israel after the completion of the program?
“In the beginning of the program I didn’t know what will happen next, but toward the end I decided to work here as an attorney, and this is what I do, I work as a foreign attorney at Barnea & Co., a firm of about 50 lawyers and some 19 partners. I specialize in commercial law and privacy law, providing legal consultation for high-tech startups and big investors. I like the job... it’s a refreshing change after all my studies.”

And where do you see your future?
“I try to fully live every experience, so now I study Hebrew at the ulpan and I even think of taking the Israeli Bar examination! But I don’t know where I’ll end up in the long term.”

Looking back at the International LLM, what doors did it open for you?
“Having the LLM. is an advantage both on the Israeli and the foreign market. The big law firms in Germany, for example, see the LLM. degree as an attractive bonus in addition to the First and Second State Examination, especially if you have completed it abroad, and with an exceptional specialization. For me personally, the LL.M. also opened the opportunity of becoming integrated in local Israeli society, both on a professional and a private level.”

How was the LLM. class?
“We came from ten different countries… and were also of different ages. Some have just finished their LL.B., others have had a lot of practical experience, and some were already parents to children. So there was a big variety. In the discussions, everybody contributed from their experience. It is not just a matter of different legal thinking, but often simply of different cultures. You are exposed to new and unfamiliar things, learn from it, and grow.”

And the country itself?
“The LLM. gives you a taste of the country and its culture, but I had also table tennis and friends to help me better integrate into local society. It was also table tennis that helped me blend in quickly in Germany, when my family migrated from the Ukraine, when I was 9 years old. The same happened in Israel. I started playing for Maccabi Tel Aviv women’s table tennis team, and traveled for the weekend league games to all parts of the country — by the way, I find it incredible how many unique spots the Israeli landscapes has to offer — and so I had the opportunity to meet new friends and see new places. It made my life here more complete.”

Lisa S.-C., Washington, D.C., USA, Class of 2014

“The LLM was academically rigorous, and people felt challenged and that they got a lot out of it. The other students were quite bright, and people came well-prepared for class discussion. Everyone drew on a lot of their own personal backgrounds when discussing certain topics, which meant that the classes were always interesting and there was a lot of dialogue. The professors were really good – they’re from all over the world and had amazing credentials.”

The Parasol Foundation is a philanthropic trust established in 2004 in Gibraltar. It is overseen by its principal benefactor, Ruth Parasol, who is considered to be one of the world’s wealthiest self-made women today. Following the immense international success of her online gaming company and its IPO on the London Stock exchange, in 2005, Ruth sold her remaining interests and dedicates her time to raising her children, to philanthropy, and to overseeing her international private investment office. For over 10 years, the Parasol Foundation has been supporting communities in Gibraltar, UK, Israel, India, and the United States. To date, the Foundation has committed over £20,000,000 for various educational, health, culture, and heritage initiatives.

Ruth Parasol says: “Our time, success, and fortune are borrowed. You can never give or appreciate enough, but every effort helps. Here, at the Parasol Foundation, we enable change by supporting talented individuals and core centers of health and education, in order to create a better future for the next generation. Through education, cutting-edge technologies, advanced medical treatments, and culture preservation we hope to contribute to a better and brighter future.”

Meet Prof. Michael Birnhack, academic director of the Parasol International LL.M. Program

Prof. Birnhack (J.S.D., NYU School of Law, 2000) is an internationally renowned scholar in the field of intellectual property, privacy law, and information technology law. He also directs the TAU Law S. Horowitz Institute for IP. For the past two years, he has served as academic director of the Parasol Foundation International LL.M. Program. Since last March Michael is also Associate Dean for Research at TAU Law.

Could you explain for whom the program is designed and how one is admitted into it?

“The Parasol Foundation International LL.M. considers applications form holders of an LL.B. degree obtained outside of Israel, who have a demonstrated knowledge of English. We evaluate the applicants’ academic achievements and professional experience, as well as the recommendations provided. The same criteria, alongside individual needs, also serve us in awarding generous Parasol Foundation scholarships, offered to some of the participants. But we also encourage and assist the applicants we accept to obtain scholarships from other resources, such as the Masa Scholarship for Jewish students, the Asper scholarship for Canadian students, the funding possibilities offered by the Israel Ministry of Foreign Affairs, or funding offered in their home countries.”

Program graduates have high praise for the curriculum and the method of study, especially the specialization tracks, the combination of courses and field trips, as well as the different methods of evaluation. Could you briefly describe the structure of the program?

“Certainly. It’s a 10-month program, which opens with three core courses, designed to eliminate any gaps in the students’ prior knowledge and to introduce the students to the Israeli legal system. That being said, it is important to note that the program is theoretical in nature, and is not about...”
Israeli law. Nevertheless, we believe that it is important for students to know something about the place where they are studying.

After this preliminary phase, which takes place before the beginning of the regular academic year, students can choose courses, seminars, and workshops according to their specialization track, from a large variety offered at TAU Law, in English, including by some 20 to 25 visiting scholars from the best law schools in the world. We also have special activities that are unique for the program students, such as the field trip you mentioned, as well as weekly presentations of contemporary legal issues with special relevance to Israel.

As for the methods of study and evaluation, I think that this is all part of the general Israeli academic approach. It is a relatively young academic tradition, cherry-picking the best of all learning and legal traditions. We have frontal lectures, as is common in the continental tradition, alongside discussion-based courses, following the Socratic method, which is common in the United States. Add to this mixture the Israeli lack of formality, and you arrive at the special way in which we teach, which the students indeed find greatly appealing.

Do students in the program interact extensively with the rest of the Faculty students, including local and exchange students?

"Definitely. The TAU Law Student Exchange Program cooperates with 45 leading law schools from all over the world. All the TAU Law classes that are taught in English thus provide an opportunity to meet different people of different backgrounds, who grew up in different legal systems. I witness how all the students, both local and foreign, are greatly excited by this opportunity and gain a lot from it, because it brings a wide spectrum of perspectives to the discussion. Take freedom of speech, for example, an issue pertinent to the seminar I teach on law and information technology. In the classroom, I meet American students, for whom the First Amendment represents a very clear position on the topic, and I have Chinese students with an alternative view, and many other different perspectives in between. The discussions are truly fascinating. Each class is a wonderful intellectual experience for the students and for myself."

As the academic director of the program, can you describe your interaction with the young but already experienced jurists from all over the world?

"As I mentioned, I enjoy the diversity in class a lot. But it is much more than that. I believe that it takes a certain courage, curiosity, and willingness to explore new things for people to study abroad. These qualities, on top of the high standard we maintain in our application process, guarantee that participants are truly excellent jurists."

Entertainment on Campus

TAU aims to make its campus a central venue not only for rigorous academic research, but also a wide range of exciting cultural and social events. Music concerts, film screenings, art exhibitions, poetry readings, and many other activities are held on campus. These are open to TAU students, staff, and often the general public.

Every Wednesday, the largest outdoor venue on campus (the lawn in front of the Gilman building) comes alive with the sound of rock music! No need to buy tickets – students and staff can enjoy performances by Israel’s leading young artists for free! Lunch al fresco on the grass is particularly recommended. In addition to the rich array of cultural and artistic events regularly on offer at Tel Aviv University, the city of Tel Aviv-Jaffa has much to offer visitors.

As Thursday is the last day of the Israeli working week, TAU encourages students and staff to kick off their weekend with a host of exciting events: gallery exhibits, film screenings, musical performances, and lectures on a variety of academic fields. Young artists are given the opportunity to showcase their work and the public is invited to share in these activities, which take place from early afternoon until late evening. Check which events are held in English on the “Thursdays on Campus” website.

Film Festivals and Screenings

Every two years, The Tel Aviv International Student Film Festival, the largest student film festival in the world, takes place in Tel Aviv, organized from start to finish by TAU students and staff. Renowned actors, directors, and cinematographers deliver lectures and master classes as part of the festival. Hundreds of student films from all over the world are screened for festival goers.

Showcasing Student Creativity

TAU encourages students to take part in performances and creative events during their studies. The Department of Theater Arts and the Buchmann-Mehta School of Music put on performances jointly and separately, allowing students to demonstrate their creativity and hard work throughout the year. These achievements are enjoyed by the TAU community and the general public.
ended, however in 1950 the two cities were united into a single municipal entity. Tel Aviv-Jaffa is now Israel’s cultural as well as financial center, a mix of antiquity and innovation, and the center of Israel’s high-tech industry and youth culture.

Greater Tel Aviv-Yafo is a world-class academic hub and a popular destination for international students. Four universities and a dozen colleges offer a wide range of programs – from short semesters to full degrees, all taught in English. Together with top academic programs, Tel Aviv-Yafo offers young people a dynamic student life.

Tel Aviv is home to hundreds of art galleries and private boutiques, showcasing a unique array of paintings, sculptures, crafts and other works by

TAU Green Campus

In a milestone for environmentalism at TAU, the university was accredited in 2011 as a “green campus” by the Israeli government, in recognition of its efforts to create a more sustainable institution. The accreditation is awarded to Israeli universities that implement programs in three key areas: academic degrees and courses in environmental studies (given by the Porter School of Environmental Studies), heightened resource efficiency through recycling and reduction of electricity and water use, and community-related projects that strengthen environmental awareness both on campus and off. Among the green innovations at TAU are more energy efficient lighting, the “Nature Campus” educational initiative, stands for the city of Tel Aviv’s new bicycle rental system, and a comprehensive plan for campus bicycle paths. TAU’s support for sustainable projects on campus is further underscored by the Porter School of Environmental Studies’ new EcoBuilding. The EcoBuilding is designed to meet the highest standards of green building, and will demonstrate innovative environmental technologies.

Art & Culture

Tel Aviv University is also the only university in Israel with a School of Music, training musicians as well as vocal performers. The school holds over 200 concerts a year on the TAU campus and is invited to tour around the world, performing in Zurich, Madrid and Berlin, among other places. Perhaps not surprisingly, given the city’s musical prominence, the Israeli National Opera is also located in Tel Aviv. Tel Aviv was established in 1909, by a group of Jewish families from Jaffa, a port city which has been inhabited for over seven thousand years. Tel Aviv originally began where Jaffa
Israeli artists. The city’s art scene encompasses everything from tiny, one-room galleries hidden in narrow, backstreet alleys to large outdoor festivals such as Nachalat Binyamin’s Friday Market, to the Tel Aviv Museum of Art, one of the largest museums in Israel. Tel Aviv University is the only university in Israel with a Department of Film and Television, and as such has shaped the development of the film and television industry in Israel. The majority of Israel’s successful directors, screenwriters and film critics all began their careers at TAU. In fact, to celebrate young creators and give them a platform to showcase their art, TAU film students organize the International Student Film Festival – the largest student film festival in the world – every two years. With its large cadre of young and motivated filmmakers and as the set location for major Israeli film productions, Tel Aviv has found itself at the center of Israel’s film culture and industry and hosts multiple international film festivals a year.

TAU Student City

The new Student City (Broshim student dormitories) is located a few minutes away by foot south of Tel Aviv University campus. Studio rooms are available for international graduate and post-graduate students. The dormitories are divided into suites with one bedroom; one student per suite. Each suite is fully furnished and includes a new kitchen and bathroom, air conditioning, Wi-Fi, and cable TV. The dorms are inspected upon move-in and any damage done during student’s stay will have to be covered by the student. A self-service laundry is located within the dormitory complex. Additional laundry and cleaning facilities are available in nearby shopping centers. Some international students choose to live off-campus either in the center of the city or outside of the city. Sharing a standard apartment with one or two roommates, may cost more or the same as the dorms.

The International LL.M. program commences with a mandatory Core Semester exclusively for our students. Three core classes are offered during this period for a total of 6/10 necessary credits: Introduction to Israeli Law, Introduction to Law & Society, and Introductory to Law & Economics.

The Core Semester takes place just before the Fall semester, and International LL.M. students have the opportunity to acclimate themselves on campus before they are joined by 30,000 Israeli and 1,000 international students in the Fall and Spring semesters. International LL.M. students will visit the Israeli Supreme Court during the Core Semester.

Is the LL.M. prep for the Israel Bar Exam?

In short, no. You should be aware that the LL.M. degree does not qualify you to sit for the Israeli Bar. Having an LL.B degree, plus a certain level of proficiency in Hebrew, will qualify you – you don’t need an LL.M. in order to practice in Israel. You should check with the Israel Bar Association for their exact requirements.

The LL.M. program is a great way to build a network of professors and professionals who can help you find work if you prove to be a great student, and is a great line for your CV – studying an advanced law degree at Israel’s top law faculty will put your CV at the top of the pile when job opportunities arise…We’ve heard this from many attorneys, especially since they themselves are alumni of the faculty.

Will I be able to work on a Student Visa?

The student visa does not allow you to work in Israel. For more information contact the Israeli consulate in your home country.

Tel Aviv University is one of Israel’s foremost higher education institutions, attracting over 30,000 talented students and renowned faculty from around the globe to our campus in central Tel Aviv.
